

Doctoral (Ph.D.) Programme of the University of Buffalo, New York, USA in Educational Culture, Policy and Society (ECPS)

Doctoral program of University of Buffalo in educational culture, policy and society is for students who are interested in the links between educational institutions (Preschool through Postsecondary) and broader social, cultural, political and economic forces and consequences. They pay special attention to institutions, policies and practices that facilitate or limit individuals' well-being, and social and economic outcomes. This program additionally focuses on cross-national comparisons of educational policies, practices and outcomes central to policymakers and school leaders around the world. Their student community is a diverse mix of students from all over the world.

Detailed information about the program can also be found on our web page (link follows).

<https://ed.buffalo.edu/leadership/academics/doctorate/ed-culture.html>

Interested candidates from India are suggested to visit the web page.